

The Broadcast Ownership limitations have served the public very well. I urge you to reconsider changes to this essential public good. Limiting monopolies on media assures freedom of access to ideas, which the media market will not provide on its own. If media is controlled by a wealthy few, our freedom of expression will be curtailed. At the very least, postpone this decision until adequate public discourse has been given a chance to weigh in on an issue that will affect our freedom of expression and choice.